INTEGRATE WITH THE ORCID API

Introducing the new OJS-ORCID plugin

Submitted by Alec Smecher on Tue, 2019-03-12 09:27

The recent launch of version 3.1.2 of PKP's Open Journal System \(OJS\) marks an exciting moment -- an upgraded ORCID API upgrading to OJS 3.1.2 can now request authenticated iDs from both contributing authors and co-authors, and Member API published works directly to an author's ORCID record with the author's permission. All journals that upgrade to the latest version benefit from the new features.

Like ORCID, OJS is an open-source, community-driven platform, which benefits from an engaged community of developer co support enabling collection of authenticated ORCID iDs was first launched in 2016 with OJS 3.0, through the work of community members including the University of Pittsburgh. The latest additions were developed by a team of OJS community members in Germany including Dulip Withanage of Heidelberg University (also an ORCID member through the German national consortium).

Display formats

1. Full ORCID iD -  <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-2345-6789>
2. Compact ORCID iD -  0000-0001-2345-6789
3. Inline ORCID iD -  Sarah Pascoe

Full ORCID iD

The full ORCID iD displays the iD icon before a complete ORCID record URL.

This is the preferred format for links to ORCID records.

 <https://orcid.org/0000-0001-2345-6789>

Why use a full URL?

- Displaying the full ORCID iD URL helps search engine robots and crawlers to recognize the iD as a resolvable URL.
- A full URL is simple for people to copy, reference or link to the URL and share it with others.
- Using the familiar URL pattern reinforces that ORCID iDs are both a persistent link and a persistent identifier.
- The https protocol builds confidence in the security and privacy of ORCID iDs.

When to use the full ORCID iD format

- the ORCID iD is shown on its own, or in a list of links
- there is sufficient space to show the full ORCID iD

Compact ORCID iD

A shortened version of the ORCID iD that displays the iD icon before the 16-digit ORCID identifier.

Abstract

Introduction: Inappropriate use of topical corticosteroids was found to cause different dermatological complications. Despite its complex adverse effects, misuse of topical corticosteroids has been a common practice throughout the world. The objective of this study was to assess the prevalence of misuse of topical corticosteroids and its associated factors in selected community pharmacies and cosmetics shops of Addis Ababa.
